One morning, I stopped at my favorite restaurant to get something to eat and got comfortable at a small table. Shortly after, I noticed four young people sitting at a table near me. After simply greeting each other and ordering, they all looked at their phones and continued to do so until their orders arrived. After photographing their food, they ate, continuing to look at their phones. I was wondering why they came here to eat together.

It was phubbing (低头症), or phone snubbing (冷落), a very common problem these days. You may not know the word "phubbing" , but this kind of act is not strange to you. In fact, 32% of people report that they are phubbed two or three times a day.

Do you have a conversation on your phone while talking to another person face to face? Do you scroll (上下滑动) through your phone while eating with someone for fear of missing out? If your answer is yes to either of them, you might be a "phubber"

A study shows that the influence of phubbing on relationships can be very harmful or destructive. For example, children felt that parents who phubbed them didn't care about them. Also, partners who were phubbed might not be pleased with the relationship because of feeling left out.

Phubbing is a learned act, so unlearning it is possible. Start by accepting the problem. Set a time limit (限制) for not using your phone. And create areas where phones cannot be used.

Don't let the modern technology keep you away from others. Next time when you're with someone, do remember to connect with the person in front of you, not the screen in your hand.

56. The writer noticed the four young people in the restaurant mainly because _____.

A. They were talking on the phone.

B. They were taking pictures of their food.

C. They were using their phones instead of talking.

D. They were arguing with each other.

57. How does the writer introduce the word "phubber" in Paragraph 3?

A. By raising questions.　　B. By listing numbers.

C. By giving reasons.　　D. By doing research

58. What does the underlined word "destructive" in Paragraph 4 mean?

A. 微乎其微的　　B. 积极正向的　　C. 有破坏性的　　D. 有帮助的

59. The writer's writing purpose is to _____.

A. To stop students playing with the mobile phone.

B. To warn people against phubbing.

C. To show how phones bring people closer.

D. To show the advantages of modern technology.

60. What would be the best title for the passage?

A. Four Silent Friends　　B. Stop Using Your Phone

C. Is Technology Helpful or Harmful?　　D. No More Phubbing

C

If you've read Lychees (荔枝) to Chang'an or watched the movie adapted from it, you must know how hard it was to get fresh lychees to Chang'an in ancient times. Many people love this sweet fruit. But have you noticed that keeping lychees fresh is still a challenge today?

___*___. Because they have special skin. It has many tiny holes that let water run out easily. Also, different from other fruits, the lychee has an inside that is not connected to the skin. Once a lychee is picked, the skin can't send water to the inside part to keep it fresh.

Like us, fruits also breathe, and they use sugars to do so. A study from Huazhong Agricultural University found that lychees breathe faster than many other fruits. This uses up their sugars and nutrients (营养) quickly, making them go bad fast. The fast breathing creates bad smells and makes the fruit lose its flavor (风味). It also gives out things that turn the fruit brown and soft quickly.

More importantly, once lychees are picked, they start giving off a special "gas" — it's called ethylene. If the ethylene gets too strong, it's like a loud "hurry up" signal for fruits which makes lots of fruits, including lychees, mangoes and bananas, age and dry out faster. On the other hand, some fruits like strawberries, blueberries, grapes, and cherries only make a tiny bit of this gas.

Scientists in Guangdong Province have found a good way to keep lychees fresher. They quickly freeze lychees at -35°C before they get too old. This helps make the water in the lychees form smaller ice crystals (冰晶) than usual, which protect the fruit's cells (细胞) instead of hurting them. This way, most of the flavor is kept.

61. What does the writer want to show in paragraph 1?

A. Lychees were expensive in old times.

B. The sweet fruit is more popular today than in the past.

C. Keeping lychees fresh has always been difficult.

D. The movie is based on a true story in history.

52. Which of the following can be put in ___*___?

A. Everyone lovesLychees　　B. Lychees lose water quickly

C. Lychees are grown in many places　　D. Modern technology makes lychees fresher

63. What do we know about lychees' breathing?

A. It helps lychees produce sugars.　　B. It helps lychees grow faster.
